me certain obligations toward Great Britain guarantees the ful-fillment by Irak of the provisions of the treaty, which include some of the main provisions of the proposed man-date; it is to report annually to the League on the measures taken to execute the treaty, and it agrees that the terms of the treaty shall not be modified without the consent of the League Council. Any dispute arising out of the treaty between Great Britain and any other member of the League is to be referred, in default of an agreed settlement, to the Perma-nent Court of International Justice.

Treaty to Expire in 1928

These obligations are to terminate, in the event of Irak being admitted to the League of Nations. They will, which expires, as at present pro-vided, in July, 1928. If Irak has not reviewed de novo by the League Council. The League, in other words, loes not entirely relinquish but it has definitely agreed to ex-clude Irak from the ordinary operation of the mandatory system.

Some such change has long been foreshadowed. The mandate for Irak was submitted to the League in draft as long ago as December, 1920. Irak was at that time under British administration and was on much the same footing as Palestine or Syria. In 1921, however, there was a well-marked change of policy. King Feisul was placed on the throne: an Irak, however, had never taken andly to the mandate, which the Arabs regarded, rightly or wrongly, as implying a tutelage which they resented. The very conception of a mandate, which was only imper-fectly understood, was repugnant to

Accordingly, in June, 1924, Great Britain proposed to the League Council that Irak had outgrown the mandate and that the Council should be content to take cognizance of the treaty as the instrument defining the mandatory obligations of the British Government.

This proposal was postponed for further consideration, but it has now been accepted in the modified form already described. Thus the draft mandate submitted four years ago has at length been finally relegated to the archives of the League Secretariat, and Irak has been recognized as the first of the former Turkish territories to acquire something apterritories to acquire something ap-proaching the status of an independ-ent state. NAVY COURT-MARTIAL FOODS IN COLD IN BEAUFORT CASE

Certain Officers and Men Face Liquor Law Charges

Special from Monitor Bureau WASHINGTON, March 28-Five or six naval officers will be court-martialed as a result of the raid recently made upon the naval transport Beaufrom the West Indies.

The names of the officers involved will not be made public for several days, after the necessary papers have been drawn. The defendants mentioned in the court of inquiry were Commander D. W. Fuller, who onerated, three lieutenants, a mahinist, a chief pay clerk and a chief pharmacist's mate.

Suspicion of illegal transactions had been current and the Beaufor had been in trouble on this count that she was arriving with contra-band liquor on board, a detail of search when the transport docked, in staterooms.

A court of inquiry was appointed, and its report has been studied by Curtis D. Wilbur. Secretary of the Navy, with the result that he has decided upon court-martials for some of the personnel of the Beaufort.

Why did they buy this grand? The answer is in the instrument itself. They found the Henry F. Miller to be all that was claimed for it—beautiful in design, superior in tone, and moderately priced. The Baby Grand met all of the requirements of an ideal piano for their home. And they found the price within their reach, the allowance on their old piano fair, and the terms within the limits of their income.

> Reduction of income taxes to the individual is one of the bairs thrown out by the association in the event prohibition is nullified and light wines and beer return. Here is an extract from one of the letters sent out by the Southern California division: "The net income of the United States Treasury from income taxes is approximately $1,250,000,000 a year. A legitimate tax on beer and wines in the United States equal in amount of the pre-prohibition period would yield the Treasury approxi-mately $600,000,000. Almost cut it in vote for the return of light wines and bootlegging, drug addiction, drunkenness, graft, crime and general demoralization."

One of the outstanding claims of the asociation in its strenuous en-deavors to bring about the end of prohibition and the supremacy of liq-uor is that the Government has failed in its efforts to enforce the prohibi-tion law. On this point, one of its letters declares: "The Government's practically limitless resources have failed and failed miserably to enforce the Volstead Act. There is only one solution: Modify that act so that it can be enforced and then enforce That modification means the legalizing of light wines and beer under proper regulation."

The association proposes, according to its literature, to increase the present 100 advocates of light wines and beer in Congress to a majority in 1926. Its active head is Capt. William 'H. Stayton, national managing vice-president, and C. G. Hinckley, national secretary and treasurer.

SCHOOL BIBLE READING WINS COURT DECISION

STURGIS, S. D., March 28-The Board of Education at Faith, S. D., has authority to expel high school students who leave the school while the Bible is being read, Judge James McNenny ruled today, in the case of A. Finger verses the School Board.

The mandamus proceedings were brought by the plaintiff, who repre-sented Roman Catholics at Faith, to force the School Board to reinstate students who had been dismissed because they refused to remain in the classroom during the Bible reading. Thirteen students had been expelled from the school because of the Bible controversy.

Mr. Shrader believes in more general participation in sports and games by school children, boys and girls alike. He referred to some colleges that now have four years of ompulsory athletic training, socalled. It is rather a compulsory participation in some form of sports and games. For instance, the University of Illinois teaches golf as a part of the college course. This is a game the student can play after he leaves ball, baseball, track, and hockey.

The major sports call for high concentration and conditioning. Nothing very definite with respect to the brotherhood has yet been ac-complished, but Mr. Shrader thought that with respect to the schools, it might be deemed advisable to award diplomas in sportsmanship. Another idea he suggested was that in awarding athletic letters and numerals it might be well to take into consideration the general sportsmanship

SENATE OPPOSES DAIL EIREANN

Irish Government's Planfor Electrification of State.

Is Questioned

By Special Cable DUBLIN, March 28 - The Irish Free State Government has decided to rush through its proposals for the electrification of the State by the exploitation of the River Shannon. The Minister for Industry and Commerce has given notice of a motion to get the Dail Eireann's approval of the project by a special resolution, so as to enable the works to be proceeded with immediately.

Criticism was directed to this notice of motion, on the ground that it was an attempt to get approval of a bill without its presentation—a pro-ceeding unprecedented in all parlia-mentary procedure. Moreover, it is proposed to advance this resolution only in one house of the Legislature. without giving the Senate an oppor-tunity of debating its contents.

Sir John Griffith, Senator, has therefore handed in notice of a motion in the Senate so as to counter this move. His motion lays down that a special commission should be appointed to consider the project, and that it should inquire into the pres-Free State and the rate at which such consumption is likely to be increased in the future, and to report to Parllament whether it is advisable that a scheme of such magnitude should be undertaken by the State, having regard to its financial and eco

PROTESTS MADE ON WOOL RATES

Southern Pacific Company Opposes Boston Plan for New Tariffs

PORTLAND, Ore., March 28-An opportunity to promote substitution of Australian and New Zealand wool for the domestic trade was seed in the movement of the Boston Wool the ancient Head brickyards have been reopened. The clay from this Trade Association to obtain preferential joint rail and steamship rates wool from the interior of the Pacific coast states to the Atlantic seaboard, H. W. Klein, traffic agent of the Southern Pacific Com; any, testified vesterday. Mr. Klein, who the Atlantic appeared before an Interstate Commerce Commissioner After a long period of inactivity who has been holding a hearing here the business has been revived and on the Boston petition He said the movement of wool trom the producing regions along the Southern Pacific lines to Pacific ports, is of insufficient volumes to justify commodity rates when compared with the volume of other trafin transportation than scoured woo!

Comparison of Costs

Mr. Klein told how San Fran cisco wool-scouring plants might be preferential rail and water rate on ool consigned to Boston or Philadelphia. He said the rate would encourage wool scouring on the Atlan tic coast rather than on the Pacific. He cited an example of how a consignment of wool of 10,000 pounds, from Winnemucca, Nev., would have to pay $242 if carried only to San ncisco, but if through the port to Boston via steamship, the rail charge would be $170.

Voluminous exhibits were offered by the Southern Pacific Company through M. S. McKenna, in charge of the railway's transshipping at San Francisco, showing methods of handling wool brought from the produc ing interior for local manufacturers' use or for transferring to ships sides for carrying through the Panama Canal to the Atlantic coast.

Discrimination Alleged

Berne Levy of San Francisco, asristant general freight agent for the Santa Fe Railroad, declared that inthrough the Panama Canal, and already regarded as a serious menace to transcontinental railroads, "prob ably would wax fatter still" at the expense of the rail carriers if the combination rail-water rate on wool from interior points to Boston were

"Our chief apprehension in case this rate should be put into effect," said Mr. Levy, "is that it would arm our competitors, the inter-coastal steamship lines. We would be carrying traffic to them by hauling wool from the interior to the ports for loading on the steamers for the haul

The effect would be to make them stronger, with improved service and facilities, so that they would be of our tonnage, westbound, as well as western wool sent east to market."

It was also stated by W. P. Wing, secretary of the California Wool

A hearing at Chicago starting on April 3, and after that the case will be argued before the commission and submitted.

Although the very moderate part of the program devoted to picturing the battle scene will be made to conform, as closely as possible, to such pictorial detail as has been handed down by historians, nevertheless it will definitely be subordinated, both in duration and flavor, to an attempt, rather, to present a graphic bit of symbolism to show the public exactly how America began her great march when, with the Redcoats in retreat, the Provincials crossed Concord Bridge leading a new way not alone to immediate victory but to progress and enduring freedom, a way which modern America is faithfully following.

London and New York Writers Discuss Interallied Debt

Ramsay Muir Criticizes American Attitude—J. L. Balderston Defends United States' Motives

Special from Monitor Bureau LONDON, March 15-Ramsay Muir, editor of the Weekly Westminster writing on the much discussed problem of interallied debts, in that journal, argued that

The sound solution of all-round cancellation would willingly have been adopted by the continental allies and by Britain, who alone would have lost (on paper), by such an arrangement. The one obstacle was America. Her moral sense is outraged by the idea of canceling debts. She is determined to be paid, whatever may happen to the debtors. But she does not like some of the consequences which some of the consequences which would follow from the satisfaction of, her demands. She insists upon being paid, but she does not want to receive the payments, which must come either in gold or in goods. She already has too much gold. And she is doing her best, by protective stariffs, to shut out foreign goods.

Unfortunately, a step has been taken which makes release from the bond impossible. In 1923 Mr. Bald-win went to America, and arranged terms with the American Government for the payment of the British debt to America, without reference to what might be done in regard to the other interallied debts.

Having made this agreement with citain, America cannot with either logic or justice cancel the debts due to her from other countries; we to her from other countries; we should have just ground of complaint if she did so. Nor can we now cancel the debts due to us. We cannot inflict upon our overburdened taxpayers the whole burden of paying America, and at the same time forgo all claims upon the countries on whose behalf we borrowed from America — especially as they tax themselves less heavily than we do. Thus the Baldwin agreement bars any settlement of the debt problem on the basis of all-round cancella-, and makes it exceedingly difficult for America to modify her atti-

Replying to these arguments in the same paper, John L. Balderston, the London correspondent of the New York World, wrote:

Americans are not all flint-hearted materialists. They have their sentimental side. Compare American help in time of famine in Europe, India, or China, disaster in Japan, with that of any other nation considered in relation to our national wealth and the wealth of that nation, and the figures obtained will prove too vast for discussion here but it is highly relevant to the debt problem. We asked one small coral atoll and we didn't get it. England achieved great empires; if she now says she doesn't want them, we remain skeptical; France and Italy irredenta were redeemed, hereditary enemies destroyed. We were offered Armenia, where is much trouble,

It is true we, didn't want territory; but Mr. Muir's statement that America made "fabulous wealth out of the needs of an agonized world during the early years of the war justifies the rejoiner that we expended in the war four times what we seek to recover from our advances to our Allies.

No space remains to attack even a few of the current fallacies about war debts. One, often stated—I have heard it from ministerial lips—is that America refused to lend money to France except on Britain's guarantee. This is an ignorant misconception. We lent $3,340,512,817 direct to France. We charged each ally with all materials, raw or finished, sent to that ally: so that if raw steel-came to England it was charged to England, even if later, made into shells and charged by England to France. This was the only rational method of bookkeeping.

only rational method of bookkeeping.

And who would guess from Mr.

Muir's article that after the Armistice the United States lent to France $1,027,427,800, nearly onethird the whole "war" debt, and lent more than half this sum to both

Britain and Italy? These great peace credits were used to subsidize small nations, maintain great armies, build up shattered trade connections, for many worthy and unworthy purposes—but not for fighting the Germans.

When French writers tell us of French lives given, American dollars lent and demanded again, are we not entitled to remember that this $1,027,427,800 advanced to France after the Germans downed arms, if repaids in full with compound interest at 5 per cent as covenanted, est at 5 per cent as covenanted, would amount to more, in terms of present-day value, than the total sum we can ever possibly recover from the French?

To this Ramsay Muir replied:

If the spirit which Mr. Balder-ston's letter expresses had governed American policy during the last five years—and, I may add, if the spirit which I tried to express (a spirit mindful of European as well as of British problems) had governed our own policy—the situation today would be very different from what it is.

I agree that there is a real differ-nce between genuine war-debts I agree that there is a real difference between genuine war-debts and advances made after the war. If the Baldwin agreement had dealt with the latter only, and undertaken payment of them in full, while reserving the problem of war-debts for subsequent settlement as part of a wider problem, I should have no quarrel with it.

But when all this is said, it seems to me that the main contentions of my article are unaffected by Mr. Balderston's argument.

(1) The method of international bookkeeping which has built up these debts was indefensible.

(2) The only practical, economic these debts was indefensible.

(2) The only practical, economic way out of the difficulty thus created is cancellation.

(3) The real obstacle in the way of cancellation has been, and is now, the attitude of America.

(4) And the Baidwin agreement makes it difficult, perhaps impossible, for America to change her attitude.

These were the main points of my argument. Mr. Balderston does not challenge any one of them. I suspect that he accepts them in his heart. I suspect he feels as strongly as I do the difficulties that surround Mr. Churchill's attempt to deal with the problem so long as it continues to be conditioned by the Baldwin

Envelope Purses bring a gay note

These imported purses are handsomely decorated with Beauvais and other rich embroideries and are carefully planned so that their colors will exactly harmonize with the new costume shades.

Matchingor Contrasting Handkerchiefs

Even the handkerchief plays an important role in this season's fashions since it must perfectly match or effectively contrast the costume. Every conceivable color and combination of colors are represented here in a most bewitching assortment.

Harmony in Perfumes

This studied harmony in accessories expresses itself in toilet preparations by carefully matching the fragrance of perfume. toilet water, face powder, talcum, sachet, bath salts and soap in exquisite American, French and English preparations.

Just as much care has been exercised in the selection of popular priced models as in the choice of the more elaborate costumes. And every model is distinguished by the Altman standard of quality

NEW SOUTH WALES LABORITES: REPUDIATE COMMUNIST PARTY

Exclusion From the Australian Labor Party, However, Is Not Entailed in This Action-Appeal for Unity Is Made

A committee of five, consisting of two representatives of each of the Communists and Australian Labor Party, with the federal president of the Australian Labor Party as chairman, sat during the progress of the conference, and one of the last matters dealt with by the Australian Labor Party conference was the consideration of the reports of this committee, and the subse-quent adoption of the majority report. Appeal for Support

This report appealed to all working classes "to support the Australian Labor Party in the coming fight, not as several parties, but as one. Bureau of Standards Gives Data on Solutions for Storage Batteries

Report Shows That Many So-Called Special Solutions Promising Greater Vitality Are of No Benefit to the Batteries and Are Likely to Prove Detrimental

WASHINGTON, March 28 - Radio fans will undoubtedly be interested in some recent experiments at the Bureau of Standards as the result of which it is stated that changing the solution in a storage battery does not charge it. An investigation has been made by experts of the bureau of certain solutions which were said to charge batteries instantly, or in a short time, as compared with the isual process. Discussing the work the bureau says:

These tests have shown that bateries containing these solutions, contrary to the claims made for them, behave in accordance with well-established laws of electro-

Analysis revealed these solutions to contain 38 to 42 per cent of sul-phuric acid, which is about the amount in the ordinary electrolyte of amount in the ordinary electrolyte of an automobile battery when charged. In some of them were found also significant amounts of sodium or magnesium as well as coloring matter. The sodium may have been added as soda, lye or Glauber salts, the magnesium as Epsom salts. The use of sodium sulphate (Glauber salts) in batteries is an old-story. It was suggested more than 35 years ago, but various authorities since that time have stated that such material. but various authorities since that time have stated that such material is without beneficial effect. This has been confirmed by the Bureau's recent experiments which show the rate of sulphation of plates to be unaffected by even 4 to 5 per cent of Epsom saits or Glauber saits.

Comparison was made between batteries containing these solutions and similar batteries containing elec-and similar batteries containing electrolyte of sulphuric acid of equivalent strength. No essential differences were shown in the charging, the voltage, the efficiency, or the temperature. When a battery is said to be charged it is understood that the battery is fully charged. A bat-tery which is almost completely dis-charged may have nearly the same voltage as one that is charged. It takes as long to fully charge a battery containing one of these solutions as to charge a similar battery containing the ordinary electrolyte. The indiscriminate addition of these solutions to a battery is not advisable, although in some cases no great harm may be done. If the solution is used to replace the electrolyte of a completely discharged battery as is usually the case, the battery may be spurred on to give a little more current because the plates retain a surplus of active material. When the battery is recharged by an electric current the specific gravity will rise much too high. This is because the acid formed at the plates by the charging current is added to the acid already present in the solution. In the bureau's experiments it rose to 1.365. This is not desirable because the local action or self-discharge within the battery is materially increased.

A battery containing one of these

within the battery is materially increased.

A battery containing one of these solutions lost 47 per cent of its charge in 4 weeks as compared with 5 per cent which was lost by a similar battery with the ordinary solution. Batteries containing solutions of higher than normal specific gravity, often give less capacity at high rates of discharge. The higher the specific gravity of the electrolyte the more injurious is the action upon the separators. It is a well recognized fundamental in battery operation that acid should be added recognized fundamental in battery operation that acid should be added only to replace that which may have been spilled, or in rare instances to adjust the specific gravity to the required standard after the completion of a full charge.

Although the materials and coloring matter considered individually may be harmless, the disadvantages in using such solutions more than offset any temporary gain. The usual electrolyte of pure sulphuric acid, and water, adjusted to the proper specific gravity at the completion of a full charge, is believed to be the best.

Finally when Friday came round again Miss Hart was able to announce a very decided improvement.

"There's one thing," she said, "that I believe we have all learned, and that is that everybody can learn to spell correctly and that there are really no such people as naturally bad spellers. Some of you have proved that this week, haven't you?"

"My father says," said Sam, "that if I can learn to spell one word I can learn to spell another, and I'm going to keep on. I'm not going to be at the bottom of this class all the time!"

TO HOLD the manuscript of Chopin's nocturne in B major, op. 62, No. 1, in my hands was a privilege granted me not long 260 by the owner of what is known as the Schlesinger collection, Hellmut F. von Gleissenberg. To hear the composition interpreted on the piano at Æolian Hall by James Friskin was my pleasure a few days later To see the precious piece of writing exhibited in public at the violun shop of Schilbach & Herrmann in West Forty-Seventh Street was a third gratification allowed me a little later still. Hereafter, to me one of the best remembered of the numerical combinations which designate the works of Chopin will doubtless be 62-1.

delivered here before an audience consisting chiefly of professional musicians. Wagnerism, according to Dr.
Weissmann, stands for sentiment, heroism, philosophical tendencies and intellectualism in music, whereas "Russianism," as Dr. Weissmann sees; it, expresses rude force, "absolute" or "pure" music, and the primitive.

However, although these two opposing tendencies in music are evichart to any scrutinizing hearer, it is hardly possible to ascribe either of these two characteristics to any one of the two groups of composers exclusively. The separating line is quite indistinct, and indeed Dr.
Weissmann himself admitted that a

Stravinsky and Schönberg

Arhold Schönberg was not alluded to in Dr. Weissmann's discourse. Yet, if, in our epoch, Stravinsky represents the type of composer whose music flouts sentiment, philosophy and intellectualism in striving for "absolute" music in its most rigid form, Schönberg, on the other hand, writes music more speculative, more addicted to intellectual ideals. Polish Literature—History lish with the appearance of "Au-tumn," than there came the announcement that the author had been awarded the Nobel Prize for Literature for the year 1924. At once there was a scramble among the literati. Who was Reymont? By another coincidence, the answer had just been written in one of Dr. Dyboski's recent books upon the literature of Poland. Each of these books was originally delivered as a course of lectures in England, whither Dyboski had come from the University of Cracow to enlighten Britishers about the artistic life of his homeland. The translator of Reymont's "The Peasants," likewise, i the professor of English literature at that same university.

It looks, then, as if the Dyboski and Dziewicki books are part of a program to create intelligent appreciation of a nation that has known happier days. So much the better. Dyboski's account certainly whets one's appetite for more authors than the solitary Pole, Sienkiewicz, who is the average reader's symbol for liter-ary Poland. And if his words find such excellent fulfillment as is brought by Reymont, then all the better again

Reymont's Career

Reymont's career, in several details, suggests the restiveness of the earlier Knut Hamsun, just as his tetralogy will provoke comparison with "Growth of the Soil." He was born in May, 1868, in what was then Russian Poland and was brought up in the country until his ninth year "His family was large, poor and patriotic. His mother and her five brothers took active part in the Polish insurrection of 1863 against Russia. Reymont himself was ex-pelled from one Russian Government chool after another because he refused to give up speaking his native Polish. His first story appeared in 1894, and was followed by others. The Peasants" was begun in 1902 and took four years to complete. In all, he has written a library of some 28 volumes, which have been translated into many foreign languages.

the Theater" was put into English years ago, as (if memory is reliable)
"The Comédienne." This and "Ferments," says Dyboski, depict re-spectively the wretchedness of the barnstormer's life and the petty bourgeoisie of clerk and small business. Thus expressly does Lord Coleridge to excerpts from the diary of the man. In "The Dreamer," too he set himself a particular task, and in author's grandfather, Sir John Taydramatized his own experiences as a few words whet our appetites.

But not a doubt seems becoming a high court judge. So made and marred by their greed of to have crossed the author's thought kindly is the affection and respect made and marred by their greed of gain, brimming at first with enterprise and energy, lapsing after suctions and energy, lapsing after suctions and energy these very matters which he himself memory of his grandfather that we Oppenheimer, formerly tillers of the soil."

In all this one may agree with Dyboski. Not so when he likens Reymont to Hardy, and Reymont's female protagonist. Yagna, to Tess. This we must ascribe to the fact that Dyboski, lecturing to Englishmen, naturally sought analogues in their own literature, just as he likened Lodz to Manchester. There is no more of Hardy in "The Peasants" than there is of Hamsun. The work seems peculiarly personal in style and development, yet of a certainty human enough to touch readers of any nationality.

Story Secondary The story is secondary. These peasants are as much fellow forces of nature as they are sentient in-dividuals. The book is replete with

U.S. Steel Touches New Low Price - Industrials in Supply

Stock prices drifted lower in today's unlet trading on the New York Stock Exchange. Several of the popular intustrials were in free supply. U. S. Reel common touching a new low for he year at 115, while American Can, American Locometive and U. S. Cast ron Pipe fell 15 to 2 points.

Better buying support was noted for the northwestern rails, Chicago & Northwestern, Great Northern preserved and Canadian Pacific selling a point or so above yesterday's final quotations.

A thin market was apparent in some of the specialities, Pittsburgh Coal and Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron each dropping about 2% points to new low levels for the year.

Merchandising and food issues displayed a firm tone, R. H. Macy & Co. and Postum Cereal each moving up more than 2 points.

The closing was heavy. Total sales approximated 350,000 shares.

Bond trading today was dull, with initial price changes confined almost entirely to fractions.

Railroad liens generally displayed a firm tone, a fair demand being noted for several semispeculative issues, including International Great Northern adjustment & and Chicago & Terre Haute 5s.

MARKET OPINIONS

Schirmer, Atherton & Ce., Boston: The stock market recently has experienced what we would term a major reaction in a bull market, resulting in widespread liquidation of speculation accounts and a total wiping out of the huge speculative structure which was reared immediately following President (Coolidge's election last November. We believe, therefore that seasoned stocks should now be bought on recessions, for the extent of the recent reaction has been drastic enough to warrant the speculation that the culmination of the bull market will be deferred until the fall, that is, if the big crops come through the summer without serious damage.

Tucker, Bartholomew & Co., Boston: We do not believe that current conditions warrant a decline of major proportions. We believe that there is no need to sacrifice good stocks at present levels, and that their accumulation will prove more profitable.

Elmer- H Bright & Co., Boston: A large number of good stocks are now obtainable to yield measurably more than a few weeks ago.

F. L. Milliken & Co., Boston: While the severe reaction may well mean a change in the general trend, the decline has already been severe, and the technical situation greatly improved. Declines of the near future can hardly be as drastic and, in any event, railles should be more frequent than during the last two weeks.

The ause of the February figures, it is no means logical or justifiable to assme that the earnings of the railross of the northwest will be badding the remaining 10 months of the yes. Probably they will not prove to e particularly good for March. The executives of the railroads in the section are always prepared for unatisfactory results during the first the months of the year. Quite often fixe charges are not earned, within the period, not to speak of the mothly proportion of dividends. The biggarnings are made during the last hal of the year.

In the first there is nothing to indicate the business and railroad traffic in the northwest this year will be materially smaller than it was last year.

The Northern Pacific is suffering from a per cent wheat crop west of the Roky Mountains and the Chicago & Nethwestern from less than a 50 per cet corn crop in Iowa.

Recession in Trade

Recession in Trade

It appears to be true that recessions in various lines of business are taking place. So far they have been mederate, and most authorities do not expect them to become much more pronounced. It is true, also, that the United States Steel Corporation is not operating on quite as large a scale as it was a week ago, and the latest advices are to the effect that the March buying of manufactured steel has not been as large as that of either January or February.

Apparently, however, the falling off has not been heavy. The United States Steel Corporation is still operating above 90 per cent of capacity, and this, of course, means a large output in the aggregate. The principal independent company is said to be operating at about 80 per cent of capacity.

operating at about so per cent of capacity.

As the week closes, it is impossible to form a particularly definite idea about the immediate outlook for Europe. Much will depend upon the outcome of the election in Germany tomorrow, the success that attends the movement under way for the forming of a comprehensive security agreement, and of what President Coolidge has in mind with respect to the calling of another naval disarmament conference.

If these various matters work out, as it is hoped they will, there will be good ground for taking a cheerful view of affairs on the other side of the Atluntic.

WHOLESALE DRY GOODS
The John V. Farwell Co. of Chicago says in its weekly review of the wholesale dry goods trade: Wholesale dry goods business continues to run about the same as during the corresponding week of last year. There was a slight increase in the number of orders received, but the volame of orders is slightly less. Buyers have been in market during the month in much larger numbers than during the corresponding month of last year.

The value of cotton piece goods exported in 1924 was greater than it had been since 1918, although in 1920 the smaller yardage then exported was of a value nearly double this year's totals. In particular there had been a very satisfactory improvement on the 1923 figures of no less than 305,000,000 square yards, and £15,000,000 in value. This improvement, unfortunately, had been confined to certain markets only.

Exports to India and Chins, recknoned in yardage, in 1924 were greater than in 1923 by 16 per cent and 24 per cent respectively. There were certain other encouraging features, but it ought not to be forgotten that there was a great leeway to make up, and that exports of cotton goods were, still some 2,500,000 square yards below the 1913 level.

After reviewing other branches of industry, and emphasizing the necessity for some relief from the burden of taxation which the trade of the country was bearing. Dr. Ree commended the Dawes reparation plan, and passed on to refer to the post-war changes in Europe and their effects on Britain's export trade for the Continent. France, which used to be a self-contained and largely agricultural country, was no longer content with her own market at home and in her colonies, but would be making a bold appearance in the world markets. Germany, who used to be Britain's greatest rival, was certain to re-establish herself, while Italy and Czechoslovakia were making determined efforts to capture a bigger share of the world's markets. On the subject of interallied debts, Dr. Ree strongly contended that a ing determined efforts to capture a bigger share of the world's markets.

We have now got German reparations on a settled footing; but the matter of interalled debts will always be a danger until it is settled. We can never feel sure that it will not be dragged like a red hering across the path of international relations.

As far as our agreement with America and our payments to her are concerned. I agree with the official attitude that we at least cannot alter that. On the other hand, we strongly support the Government's contention that whatever terms our allies offer to America they should offer to us. As to the nature of the actual settlement with our allies. I think the official note proves, if proof were needed, that we have no desire to be harsh.

Hamburg critics point out, however, that there is no need for German alarm at the progress shown of late by the Trieste yards, seeing that their maximum output at the present time, which is not likely-to exceed 60,000 tons a year, is still a long way behind their "natural" average prewar output of 120,000 tons.

Change of Régime Raises Hope of Progress to Agreement; planning to attend the rehabilitation conference in Peking with fresh proposals for the control of opium in China.

As a result of the turn of events in China, and also the introduction of a new regime in Shanghal, officials of the association are hopeful that much progress toward a settlement of the opium question will be made and that the activities of the opium combine working in Chinese ports chiefly from Shanghai may be restrained. George Hsu and Dr. R. Y. Lo ara leaving for Peking as delegates to the rehabilitation conference and are taking with them a petition drawn up by the local association.

dent bureaus in different provinces for the direct control of the optum traffic by Peking; abolish illegal pressure brought to bear on farmers by militarights to plant poppy; reliterate instructions to the customs officials regarding the importation of optum; establish hospitals and santariums for the care and cure of optum; establish hospitals and santariums for the care and cure of optum addicts; emphasize once again the old law regarding the arrest of people breaking the optum laws; eliminate from office those officials who are optum smokers; and urge co-operation by all people with the inspectors.

In connection with the second suggestion additional argument for its realization has been furnished by recent revelations that in two districts in Fakien province, long known for its part in optum preduction, 200 Chinese Christians who refused to obey the Governor's edict and plant poppy were alain during the course of last year. The Governor inaugurated a systematic campaign of persecution against a Christian community of about 100 afres who refused to have any part in the thering the Governor's desires.

AUGUSTA. Ga., March 28—Samuel Hardy and G. M. Lott Jr., Canadian doubles champions, were paired against S. H. Voshell, New York, and A. H. Chapin Jr., Springfield, Mass., in the men's doubles of the South Atlantic tennis tournament here today.

In the singles, Voshell met Takelchi Harada of Japan for the privilege of going into the finals against Lott, and Miss Claire Cassel of New York matched racquets with Mrs. T. F. Sohst, New York, for the title.

Miss Cassel and Harada awaited the outcome of a match between Mrs. A. H. Chapin Jr. and Mrs. Sohst with Voshell for opponents in the finals for the mixed doubles title.

Semifinal matches were completed there yesterday.

Semifinal matches were completed here yesterday.

Voshell paired with A. H. Chapin Jr. gained the finals by defeating F. C. Baggs and Dr. William Rosenbaum, both of New York, 6—1, 6—4, 6—3.

Miss Cassel and Harada of Japan defeated Miss P. Chapin of Springfield, Mass., and Lott of Chicago, in the semifinals of the mixed doubles, 6—2, 6—4.

Vincent Richards, Clympic champion and second ranking player, defeated Harada of the Japanese Davis Cuptem, 6—2, 6—3, in a brilliant exhibition match. Later, paired with F. T. Hunter, Clympic doubles champion, Richards won an exhibition set of doubles from Lott and Harada, 3—5.

In the men's singles, Harada won from Vochell by default, going to the free final seam, and has played forward on the variety team during the past year. He was second high scorer, making 17 field goals and 21 foul goals.

NEW YORK, March 28—An intractional amateur billiard tournampt in connection with the sesquicenth-nial of the Declaration of Independete. at Philadelphia next spring, was nounced as in process of arranement, at the twenty-ninth annual meting of the National Association of Amateur Billiards Players at ne Liederkranz Club, yesterday evenig, to be held at the Union League Clb, Philadelphia, next February or Math. Philadelphia, next February or Marh. Several of the best players of Euroe will be brought over and will meet leading stars of American billiars. Negotiations are already in progres with the amateur bodies of Hollad, Belgium and France, and there is a e-port that a Spanish player may be added.

Further extension of the co-orrlaunching last year in the metropd-tan district, was also reported. Stos for an agreement along similar lies in St. Louis is already under paral operation, and the association autho-ties in Chicago have obtained a fill copy of the agreement and the val-ous steps taken to bring it about in use in organizing one this spring ad summer.

It is also hoped that the Bostn amateurs, who have hitherto had aloof from the room keepers, will alo adopt it. Last month, the National Class B balkline, a tournament scheuled to be held in a Boston room, hit to be brought back to New York in account of the lack of interest in the event by leading Boston players. event by leading Boston players. EDITORIALS

In the March number of the Atlantic Monthly, George W. Anderson, a former Interstate Commerce Commissioner, and now a federal judge, and therefore a recognized student of such matters, discusses present and future transportation problems in the United States. He finds little encouragement in existing conditions, either on the highways with their increasing number of automobiles and automobile trucks, on the railroads with what he refers to as their self-steering carrying devices, or in the rivers and canals, still urged as the means which will eventually furnish cheap and effective commodity highways. Like many another analyst who has delved deeply and thoughtfully into the matter, Judge Anderson has succeeded rather in emphasizing the difficulties which exist than in finding a patent solution of the problems presented.

But while offering no defense of what he charges has been the mismanagement of American railroads, Judge Anderson is convinced that these carriers, eventually, must constitute the ependence of shippers and producers, as well as of travelers and tourists. He does not underestimate the importance of mobilized highway transport. This he regards as a development more revolutionary than any that has resulted from all transportation methods since the dawn of history. For the moment the tremendous growth of motor transportation facilities seems to forecast the abandonment of thousands of miles of railway and trolley lines. In New England, for instance, it is proposed to abandon permanently 1000 miles of the tracks of the Boston & Maine Railroad, while in Massachusetts about 570 miles of trolley trackage have been discarded. He does not find that the motor car is entirely responsible for the failure of moribund railway lines to survive and prosper. There are, he concludes, thousands of miles of railroad that never should have been built. This does not mean that they should be abandoned. But this is inevitable, he believes, unless "we

Interesting figures are presented to show that as carriers of people automobiles have already passed the railroads in the number annually transported. It is not apparent, of course, that the increasing number of travelers by automobile indicates a proportional decrease in the number of train passengers. Thousands who use motor cars for short or even long trips might, in the absence of that utility, have remained at home. The general mobility of the people has been greatly increased. Likewise in the matter of commodity transportation, it is agreed that in the prompt and reliable movement of high-class merchandise from door to door the truck is the more efficient and economical have, very soon, radical changes in organization, equipment, and management." He declares the railroads need an intelligent conservation program as much as do the forests.

Here Judge Anderson proceeds to discuss fearlessly, and fairly, it must be agreed, a vital economic problem which demands immediate As is well known, the tendency now seems to be to encourage the development of motor-trucking lines which operate in competiwith each other and in competition with allel rail lines. He seriously questions the wiscom of any public policy which permits roaddestroying trucks, moving over free rights of way, "to take the cream of the business in the most favorable season, remitting the rail lines to an unremunerative, but enforced, service in bad weather-while we compel the rail lines to pay exorbitant taxes, which go in substantial part to create the free roads on which trucking concerns, frequently financially irresponsible, carry, damage, or lose goods."

But it is apart from this purely economic problem that he finds a condition which to him seems almost insoluble. The physical and human equations are perplexing. Interesting and significant comparisons are made between the provisions for safety on what are referred to as the self-steering highways, on which the tracks determine where the locomotives and attached vehicles shall go, and the non-steering roads, where every driver of a motor car insists upon the privilege of directing the course of his vehicle at will. "The function of the ordinary chauffeur is," Judge Anderson observes, "in dominant aspects, more difficult, more dangerous to himself and to other users of the highway, than the functions of the locomotive engineer." But he finds that instead of having on the non-steering roads only carefully selected drivers there are millions of "engineers" of both sexes-"some of them frequently drunk, and a considerable number of them financially irresponsible."

While the record of automobile sales and registrations may seem to contradict the assertion, it is true nevertheless, according to Judge Anderson, that there is a gradual checking of motor car use. More and more Americans, he concludes, are seeking safety and comfort by going back to the rails-the steering roadleaving the automobile to increasing confusion and to the mercy of its multiplying progeny.

Rhodesia is a long way from Chicago, yet the great power and informative worth of the Chicago newspapers has bridged the oceans and traversed the arid veldt to influence the minds of the people of that South African colony. It is a striking tribute to the power of the press that it should thus annihilate space and time. The editors of the Chicago Tribune, foremost of the morning newspapers and most diligent depicters of life in that town, will, we are sure, be proud to learn of their success in conveying to the people of Rhodesia, and other distant places, a lifelike picture of social conditions in Chicago.

The Rhodesia Herald, of Feb. 13, devotes some space to informing its readers as to the beauties of existence in the metropolis of the middle west. "Chicago is the wickedest city in the world," it starts off by saying, thus at a stroke depriving Port Said of what has hitherto been its chief claim to fame: "Even Paris is better. Apaches are gentle compared with the gunmen of Chicago's underworld. . . . Assassin's bullets are mowing down men. . . . Women fear to venture out at night. In one section a hairy, demented man described by several victims as 'a human ape' is spreading terror throughout the neighborhood." The suburbs are even worse: "There gunmen gather in evening dress to run wild in the many gambling dens."

The punctiliousness of the gunmen in donning the livery of social servitude for their evening diversions somehow suggests the "movies," and this impression is heightened by the report of our old friend, "Tarzan of the Apes," terrorizing peaceful residence districts. Although Chicago has a dry mayor, our South African friends are informed that "beer sells like water." The comparison doesn't seem happy. Perhaps, however, they sell water on the veldt.

According to our South African contemporary, this record is causing Chicagoans "some uneasiness, but mixed with these soul-searchings is a slight element of perverted pride."

Perhaps. We cannot search the minds of Chicagoans. Presumably their newspapers feel pride in the criminal record, else they would not exaggerate it, rolling it over like a dainty morsel under their tongue. The people who know Chicago through other methods than the perusal of its morning press know it for a wonder city. It is overcoming the handicap of an ignoble and commonplace site by making of itself a most beautiful water front comparing favorably with Naples and with Constantinople.

It has accomplished the unbelievable in the perfection and gradual installation of its "Chicago plan." It possesses in its Art Institute incomparably the greatest art center in the United States, and in its Field Columbian Museum one of the greatest collections in the world. It boasts of two notable universities-the Northwestern on the north, the University of Chicago with its peerless group of grav Tudor buildings on the south side. In his intellectual interests the Chicagoan is eager, diversified, unconventional. Of finance, commerce, industrial and business enterprise it is needless to speak. It is a glorious city, the future of which can scarcely be forecast.

Yet to the outer world the newspapers of this incomparable city carry just such misleading sensational messages as that which we have condensed from the Rhodesia Herald. It is a pity that the Chicago spirit which turned the course of a river in order to purge the lake water of filth could not perform a like miracle with some of its newspapers.

Proof that, on the whole, some improvement has taken place in the relations between the

Scandinavian

Disarmament Project

European nations since 1914 is contained in the current plans for reducing armaments in the Scandinavian countries. Denmark and Sweden. After the most painstaking study and careful weighing of all possibilities and probabilities, the governments of those two countries have recommended almost unprecedented cuts in the tax burdens devoted to the national defense. Though in neither case has any final decision been taken as yet, the parties in power have received the indorsement of the voters at recent elections, and there is every likelihood that, before the next meeting of the Assembly of the League of Nations, the defense system of the two countries will be placed on a new basis.

It is the working out of two theories that causes the difference in opinion as to national defense. One of these two theories is that of instant readiness for every contingency, based on the worst possible interpretation of every neighbor's motives and intentions. The second is an elastic adaptation of a country's military policy to the political situation, as it may be for the moment or as it may develop, combined with every effort to effect reconciliation and peaceful settlements of international disputes. The first is the ideal of the old European militarists. The second that of the new Social-Democratic governments in power in Sweden and Denmark.

Before the days of conscription, when each king maintained a relatively small professional army, ready to execute his personal policies, the old ideal of instant readiness was capable of realization. But even after universal military service was imposed on the nations, the military commanders clung to the same ideal. Success in war, they said, was based on the ability to place the highest number of the most highly trained men in the field at the shortest possible notice. Before the outbreak of the World War, this theory was worked out to such perfection, and the line between political and military command was drawn so fine, that when the crucial moment came the statesmen were not able to restrain the military organization they had allowed to be built up from going almost automatically into action. "Who commands at Berlin?" asked the Austrian Field Marshal, Conrad von Hoetzendorff, "von Bethmann-Hollweg or von Moltke?" The whole issue lay in the answer to that question, and in Vienna the situation was virtually the same as regards Count Berchthold and Herr Conrad himself.

In France the Socialist leader, Jean Jaures, had for years pleaded in vain for a reduction of the standing army, and the training, instead, of the greatest possible reserve. But the generals did not believe in the need of reserves. They were convinced that, should a war be declared it would be decided within a few weeks by the men mobilized during the first days. Even the ammunitions plants they ordered shut down, so as to have more men ready to march. Now the French realize that M. Jaures was more nearly right than the generals. It is the Jaures idea that the governments of these Scandinavian countries want to apply. In them, too, the professional military men decry any scheme to reduce the standing armies, as dangerous to national safety, and in this they are but echoing the opinions of army and navy officers everywhere. The Labor leaders, now in power, are resolved, on the other hand, to reduce both the terms of military service and the tax military specialists to their proper function as professional executors of a political policy and not as originators or as shapers of that policy. Neither country is likely wholly to disarm, as yet, but both will cut down their armaments based on the situation prior to 1914. Both are resolved that neither competitive armaments nor the largest possible standing armies shall stand in the way of the new ideal of arbitration and the gradual reduction of all military forces.

Erno Dohnányi, called from Budapest to New York to direct the concerts of the State Sym-

Step Forward

Taken by

phony Orchestra the first half of next season, and Eugene Goossens, called to direct them the second half, may be imagined as doing more for the modern cause in America than conductors summoned from Europe in former years have done. Both being composers and both being in close contact with advanced movements, they are without question competent to interpret any works set before them, whatever the style or the idiom, They possess a knowledge of the old music and they have made the acquaintance of the new.

But not only to them should mastery of the situation belong. To the State Symphony there has descended from an earlier organization, of the same management as itself—the Russian Symphony Orchestra—an inheritance of progressiveness. True enough, the State Symphony under its recent leaders, Josef Stransky and Ignatz Waghalter, has confined itself to the presentation of the most familiar symphonies, tone poems and overtures of the standard repertory; whereas the Russian Symphony, in quite opposite manner, devoted itself to the production of radical novelties. It does not matter if those novelties have long since lost their revolutionary clang, and if some of them have actually begun to sound out of fashion. The historic fact remains that the Russian Symphony was a group of independent instrumentalists which existed to explore fresh fields; and one, moreover, that pursued its explorations with brilliant

The State Symphony has continued the Russian Symphony idea of independence, though the circumstance of its having started with oldschool conductors has kept it to a narrowly classic type of program. Now, every disability seems to be overcome in the plan for the concerts to be given in part under the baton of Mr. Dohnányi and in part under that of Mr. Goossens. Will the men, however, of the State Symphony lack the confidence in their time that the men of the Russian Symphony had in theirs?

No doubt the artists of the earlier institution disclosed an aggressive mood and employed a boisterous method in trying to set up Scriabin as a master beside Strauss. If the State Symphony artists have not the will to follow their example, then it may be that orchestras need a revision of personnel. Possibly they would be better off if their ranks were recruited with modern men-the kind that go in for athletics as well as æsthetics, and that read the sporting pages in the newspapers; and, speaking of music, the kind that have taken part with the other fellows singing in the glee club, and that have occasionally forgotten their Bach, Beethoven and Brahms to listen to a little jazz.

Editorial Notes

In his lecture at the Huddersfield Technical College, Yorkshire, Eng., the other night, a speaker drew a vivid picture of the waste involved in the ordinary method of coal consumption, which should arouse thought everywhere. "It is a surprising fact," he is quoted as saying, "that, although coal was discovered 1240 years ago, the problem of burning it economically is only now being considered." He explained that bricks could be made from furnace clinker and ashes, by mixing them with lime and water, and added that the CO, from chimneys, when freed from smoke and dust, was a most valuable food for all vegetation, including fruit trees and root crops. And then he made this specific and promising forecast:

In the future all our coal will be treated chemically before using it for power purposes, thus bringing it on to the same basis as iron, stone, cotton, wool, or other raw material. We shall then find we can secure from one tor of coal 14 cwt. of smokeless fuel, three gallons of motor spirit, 17 gallons of oil, 15 lbs. of sulphate of ammonia, and 5000 cubic feet of rich gas, the total value being twice that of the coal.

As the date approaches which has been set for the trip to the North Pole by seaplane, to be attempted under the pilotage of Captain Amundsen and an American, Lincoln Ellsworth, the commercial possibilities which might be developed out of the enterprise loom large. For the flight to the pole from Spitzbergen, whence the last hop is to be made, is less than 700 miles, and should only take about seven hours. The expedition, it is announced, will remain some twelve hours at its destination-just sufficient time, that is, to make the necessary observations-and thereby, incidentally, a precedent is being set for future travelers. One can, indeed, envision already, the sparkling advertisements of some wide-awake tourist concern, beckoning prospective "tired business men" during the summer months away from the dusty turmoil of their offices in the city "for a few hours amid the cooling breezes of the North Pole." One shudders at the prospect,

Although the election at Columbia University of the eminent Negro poet, Countee P. Cullen, to membership in Phi Beta Kappa, national scholastic fraternity, was by no means unexpected, yet the fact of its occurrence serves no less as a rebuke to those who would allow racial animosirebuke to those who would allow racial animosities to thwart justice. The increasing elimination of such prejudices which deny equality of opportunity in the various departments of every-day experience is a goal widely desired, and the field of education, in which its advantages will be uncompromised by privilege, and attainment in scholarship will be rewarded without discriminations, may well point the way to the fuller attainment of this ideal.

The Diary of a Political Pilgrim

Perhaps the most striking of the many public monu-ments here in Geneva is the great carved wall in one of ments here in Geneva is the great carved wall in one of the parks which commemorates the Reformation Many hundreds of feet long and probably thirty feet high, it contains carvings of some of the historic scenes of the Reformation period and acts as a background for statues of the great reformers.

In the center are figures of Calvin, Farch Bess and Knox. On one side, under data beginning the are scenes from the artier continents at august which chartered about Geneva itself, and statues of the elector of Brandenburg, Coligny, and so on. On the other, the Puritan movement of the English-speaking world predominates.

First is the Lord's Prayer in English. Then Roger Williams (1636) stands out, and the famous pact signed on the Mayflower in 1620. Then comes Cromwell and the British Bill of Rights of 1689. On other stones are to be seen such names as Luther and Zwingli. Over all runs the legend, "Post Tenebras Lux." In its simplicity and directness of appeal it is one of the most impressive monuments to be seen in the world.

So does Geneva commemorate a great movement which liberated human thought from bondage nearly 400 years ago. Just across the river, on the edge of the famous lake, and facing Mont Blanc and the wonderful range of the Alps, is another monument. 4 4 4

It is not nearly so impressive as the other. It contains no statues of heroic figures. It is, however, the symbol of a movement of liberation whose achievements are still to come, rather than a memorial of great deeds greatly done. It is the hotel in which dwells the Secretariat of the League of Nations.

Thus, humbly housed, stands the outward and visible sign of a movement launched for the purpose of liberating mankind from the curse and scourge of war. Founded the moment when the old order in Europe crumbling in ruins, when thrones and empires were falling, when revolution was stalking westward from Rus s a, the League has suffered hardly less from its friends

On the one side, the wonders it could do were so exaggerated that it came to be represented as a super state, as a monstrous and horrifying engine which would interfere in other people's affairs and limit the liberty and impair the sovereignty of even so great a power as the United States. On the other hand, it was ridiculed as impotent and absurd. What, opponents asked, could this puny secretariat tucked away in neutral Switzerland do to chain up and control the terrific forces which had broken forth in the World War and which, they declared, all history showed were clearly destined to accumulate and break forth in flames again and again?

Steadily, amid flattery and abuse, the League has gone about its work. It has made successes here, it has encountered failures there. It has not played the part in the world that its admirers had expected. It has not gently faded out of sight, as its enemies had hoped. exists and it persists because it has real work to do and because it is doing that work well.

There are two quite distinct sides to the activities of the League. The one side can best be studied by watching the Secretariat at work. The other side will be seen best during the coming sessions of the Council of the League. The one gives an example of a genuinely international organization in action. The other shows how far such an organization can help the nations of the world to solve the constant and ever-increasing interna tional difficulties which confront them.

A most interesting thing in Geneva today is the func tioning of the Secretariat. Assembled there are about 500 persons, belonging to no less than thirty nations While each retains his or her nationality intact, they work in the office, not as the representatives of their countries but as the servants of the Leagu might be thought that, inasmuch as the League is cerned with almost all the most thorny problems a day, with minority questions, with disarmament security, with economics, the Secretariat must be a modern edition of the tower of Babel, a dissonant tongues and a discord of bitter argument and feeling. Not, at all. The machine works with wone smoothness. English and French are the omicial ridges, but no tongue is debarred. Each section solitical, the mandates, the financial, the transit beauth, the armaments, and so on, is composed of ent nationalities. Whatever their prejudice about eigners before they arrive, the members find that remarkably short time they can think and work tog without intrigue and without any other feeling the common interest in the accomplianment of their mon task.

That is really a tremendous achievement. It proves that differences of race, culture, language and religion are not an obstacle to honest and efficient co-operation when real public service, rather than selfish ends, is the purpose in view. At Geneva the old idol of national and racial exclusiveness, the idea that nations have to live in water-right compartments because the barriers between them are too formidable to be overcome, is hourly being destroyed. being destroyed.

This is the real secret of the famous Geneva "atmosphere" about which League enthusiasta talk and which so frightens the "practical" men. It is the natural growth when the representatives of over fifty nations assemble together—not to dicker with one another for advantages. but to try to find some way of uniting man

They cannot help realizing how essentially alike all human beings are, and how superficial and removable are the differences which divide them. And then the barriers which centuries of hatred and strife have erected between the families of men begin to fade, and the possi buity of "the Parliament of man and the fede the world's seems nearer to realization than perhaps in time it actually is.

There is another reason for the success of the Secretariat. It has no political functions. It is not its pusitions to take decisions. Its duty is patiently to aft out the truth about international problems, to get at the facts to undersand the rival points of the stack which is all the easier for it because every investigation is undertaken by people of many nationalities and, therefore, under the influence of none. Thus when the leaders of the nations arrive, who alone can speak for their countries, they find a strictly accurate appreciation of the problem before them, free from national and party bias, and so most likely to help them to a decision which is both just and wise. + +

Thus during five years the Secretariat of the League

Thus during five years the Secretariat of the League has been patiently and persistently at work, breaking down prejudice, promoting international concord, uplifting the standards of international dealing in a thousand ways. Though it is easy to exaggirate what it has actually accomplished, there is no question that it has laid some of the foundations upon which the ultimate edifice of human unity and world peace must rest.

And so, desplie its lowly beginnings, it may yet come about that the movement which centers in the hotel on the lake of Geneva will occupy a place in history beside the other great movement commemorated by the Reformation monument across the bay. For if the, vision of its founders comes true, and the League of Nations does succeed in abolishing the barbarous and inhuman institution of war, there will doubtless some day be erected another monument in Geneva to those who initiated it and who stood by it in the dark days when it had few and who stood by it in the dark days when it had fe

The Week in New York

New York, March 28 "College bred." a phrase which used to be employed to describe what has been characterized as a grand loaf that lasted for four years, has now become a label that need not be discarded when a youth enters the portals of what business men of the old school caled the "university of hard knocks." Not only has the label changed its meaning in the eyes of business men so that it some-times lets the youth past the "welcome" sign, but also some very large New York firms now go so far as to send personal representatives to Princeton and other universities near here to pick out promising youths for prospective positions. The bureau of appointments at Princeton, which finds work to help the students earn their way through the university, also helps in "sorting" uates, to see that "broad-minded men sharpened to a point" get started in the direction in which they have been turned.

. . . . The sea may after all turn out to be a gold mine, not in the sense of producing actual gold bricks, but in yielding valuable chemicals, which can be pumped out while you wait. Bromine, which has contributed largely to the development of the motion picture industry as an agent in bringing the pictures out, and which is also being used now to stimulate gasoline to more is also being used now to stimulate gasoline to more expansive endeavors, is to be extracted from the ocean at a rate, it is hoped, of 100,000 pounds a month. A ship, the Ethyl, is to be sent out in April by the Ethyl Gasoline Corporation, equipped with a plant capable of treating 7000 gallons of water a minute. As only about one water pumped out of the ocean and back, the mining operation will not make any very large gaps.

The mechanical age of music is now so far alvanced that Frof. A. H. Thorold, head of the department music and music history of the universities of Munic and Frankfort, on his arrival here this week, remarked that orchestras have so many instruments for expression that they have nearly crowded their old partner, the human voice, out of bed. The singer in opera today, according to Dr. Thorold, not only is not needed, but can scarcely be heard. The instruments, of course, have a clear advantage, because with them any number of clear advantage, because with them any number breaths can bleat as one, and do that in a fairly universal language; though it must be admitted that, however remote the Italian or French or German as sung to from what was in the school textbook, there is a satisfaction now and then in having a singer ass command of the stage.

Expression in popular music here, it is true, has reached the point where Irving Berlin in a purely orchestral jazz piece can set his audience giggling at will by little more than a change in tempo, but the singing, too, has been going on lust fly this season. "Patience," which lacks nothing in words, has just finished a successful run, and some of the other Gilbert and Sullivan operatias are about to begin one of their perennial revivals. What is being sought in New York is not the elimination of the size in the lazz but a combination of the two in some singing or the jazz, but a combination of the two 'n some thing more complete and unified than the usual musical comedy. Otto H. Kahn, the banker, who is, among other things, a patron of music and the stage and almost every thing that usually needs and occasionally gets money, has been urging his literary friends and the incumbents of Tin Pan Alley, where jazz is hammered into the most finished shapelessness, to join forces and turn out what would be a completely American jazz opera; something which no other country could claim, or at least would.

Notwithstanding all the variety of noises that can be made by a jazz orchestra at the height of its not always artistic fervor, no less a person than Igor Stravinsky, the listinguished Russian co distinguished Russian composer, who was here recently conducting what he calls his "present-day" music, has pointed out that the most modern mediums of music-the player-piano, the phonograph, and the radio—give opportunities for new effects which have not only not been felt, but have not even been reached for. That the radio music makes up in desirability what it lacks in importance was further attested this week when a college in Kansas that radiocasts crop reports was called on to divide its time evenly with a New York hotel which on to divide its time evenly with a New York hotel which serves jazz, so it could use the same wavelength; but no special orchestrations have yet been made to allow for its weaknesses and use its capabilities. Not until the phonograph or radio waft out the breath of wind instruments, which they do best, or the player-plane takes to hitting on all octaves, which a single pair of hands could not do, will the visible musical worlds be conquered, and by that time there probably will be many more that are still unseen.

American Ideals and "Child" Labor To the Editor of THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR:

So decisive has been the rejection by the states of the so-called Child Labor Amendment that the world at large may assume the American people are less idealistic than they were reputed to be, which makes it all the more imperative that the true significance of the rejection should be emphasized.

The fact is that a child labor amendment has not been before the states in any actual sense. The amer ubmitted provided for regulation or prohibition of labor of minors up to eighteen years of age. To speak of the work of an eighteen-year-old, or even a sixteen-year-old youth as "child" lator is absurd. By all accepted human measurements childhood ceases at fourteen years of age

The United States Army will enlist youths at eighteen nd boys may enter the navy at a younger age, sixteen believe, under certain conditions. The idea, therefore, of prohibiting, as "child" labor, the work of youths capable army and navy service evidently struck most state of army and navy service evidently struck most state legislators as extreme.

There is a well-founded suspicion here in Washington that opponents of real child labor legislation, that is to say, of legislation protecting children of fourteen years and under, or even of sixteen years of age, exerted their influence in favor of submitting the present amendment, feeling sure that the sighteen-year limit would produce the very reaction we now are witnessing. Had a bona fide child labor amendment been submitted, stipulating fourteen, or possibly sixteen years as the limit, I am convinced a different reception would have greeted it among the states.

I feel sure also that, had those who would abolish child labor sought a fourteen or sixteen-year fam in Congress, a number of senators and representatives who yould to submit the eighteen-year limit would have opposed the resolution. Seeing in the eighteen-year lim however, a "youth" labor amendment, and believing the such would fail, they supported it as the most certaineans of having an amendment defeated, and so of tarding the whole movement against child labor.

The American people are indeed against child labor. The rejection of the amendment is not a reflection up them but a lesson to sponsors of the reform not to to stretch a ban upon child toil over into youth and manhood. If they want the latter, call it by its name.

Steel Traps and Deer Hunting To the Editor of THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

I wish to congratulate you on the stand you are taking in regard to the cruelties involved in the use of steel traps for fur-bearing animals. I do not believe the trappers themselves realize how cruel the practice is.

And also, I do not believe the deer-hunters realish how very many deer are wounded and left to perish, offer after terrible suffering. Surely it is time to put a sto to people shooting these beautiful, defenseless animals.
